

As Law Enforcement, Military, and Security professionals, we understand the importance of ongoing training in weapons and tactics in order to maintain mission readiness.

In a perfect world, we would all have a 360-degree live fire shoot-house and an unlimited supply of ammunition with which to train.

In reality, ammunition costs and the lack of live fire training facilities severely limits our ability to conduct realistic training exercises.

An effective solution is the introduction of simulated, reality-based force-on-force training to complement existing live fire training.
